NEW ZEALAND.

From New Zealand we have files of papers to the 30th July.

The Wallington correspondent of the Otago Daily Times states, under date July 24:—"The election excitement has now calmed down, and people here are beginning quietly to review the results. It is not, however, as yet clear whether the slight probability of Major Atkinson resigning and recommending that his rival should be sent for. So far as I can learn, the friends of the Government are, on the whole, satisfied with the result, and are inclined to think that they may be as favourable as could be expected, considering that no definite issue was before the country, and that in the majority of instances the elections were fought on the question of the Government's policy, and the alleged misdeeds of the party on misadventures. Then it is pointed out that, according to the admission of the Vegetables themselves, Major Atkinson has a slightly larger following of pledged supporters than Sir John Hall, and that the latter's Liberalism is unqualified in their adhesion, many of those who declared themselves in favour of Sir Julius did so with

The Tribune also has a word to say about the "reservations, such as staffing, that they were to sign with the federal government," and the "long learning." An other advantage, which the Ministerials took with them in the moral support of the Grey party as against a Vogel régime.

According to the election of Mr. Stout for Dunedin East, the Lyttelton Times says:—"When Sir Julius Vogel determined to contest the Ashburton seat, Mr. Stout went out of his way to give him a warm support. His support has not been without results. Mr. Stout has been elected for West. But the letter of that month remains as a sign that between Sir Julius and Mr. Stout there cannot be anything like political enmity. Mr. Stout, as a man of brains, a great student of history, and a man of high character, is a figure like everybody else, to put it in a better light, he has them rather more than anybody else. His presence, nevertheless, adds greatly to the practical aspect of the Opposition, and it is to be regretted that the Government has the reputation of being dictatorial. Mr. Stout knows how to give way for the benefit of his party."

The Tribune, the organ of the Catholic party in Dunedin, has also a few words to say about the election of Mr. Stout, and the "long learning."

argued that Catholics should vote only for those who would carry out their views. When the Edmunds Bill introduced by Mr. Pye in 1882, which had for its object the granting of the vote to non-Catholic immigrants, was brought to the second reading, the Telegraph published what it termed a "black list" of the Otage members who voted against it. In this list figured the names of three out of four of the party members. Mr. Bracken, however, was not on the list, and his vote in his favour. Mr. Bracken, it is presumed, had in consequence the black vote, but he was beaten.

The New Zealand Refrigerating Company seems (states the Telegraph) to have been a very successful enterprise. Its nominal capital is £40,000, to 8000 shares of £5 each, while its actual capital consists of £30,000, of which £13,000 is paid up. A copy of the company's third annual report is before us, and shows that the business has been going on for the year which ended on the 30th of last March. The works, we are told, have during the year been kept in full operation, 12 steamers having been loaded, or partially loaded, with 2011 tons of frozen meat, and 1000 tons of fish, during the year.

The net profit shown—including £159 18s. 10c. brought forward from previous year—amounts to £3719 9s. 2d. It is observed by the directors that "the net return is slightly less than the year previous, but, owing to the heavy, owing, in a great measure, to the high rate of freight and heavy London charges. It is satisfactory, at the same time, to know that the best prices obtained have been secured for the coal." The directors are, however, the chairman of the board, Mr. Roberts, is now in London, and will endeavour to secure a reduction in charges, and co-operation amongst consignees in placing the more of the market. The directors will also endeavour to secure, in the colony, the directors will take steps to secure, if possible, freights for 1880 on more favourable terms than those now current, realising as they do that the rates are an accomplished fact, and will be kept fully occupied.

The half-yearly general meeting of members of the Auckland Working Men's Club was held on July 26. The half-yearly report and balance-sheet were submitted. The former showed that the club had been successful in the increase of 46 members during the half-year. The balance-sheet showed that the receipts for the half-year were £258 12s., and the £1200, £1875, £2610, £3410 and £448; leaving a balance of nearly £200 in favour of assns. A lengthy discussion took place on the question of checking the introduction of fringes by members of the club on Sunday and it was agreed that the committee should be empowered by the member introducing a friend, also by the visitor himself.

During his visit to W. Hampden (says the Northern Advertiser) the Hon. E. Mordaunt has been well able to contribute to the dietetic table, and he was very surprised at their extent and the manner in which the trees thrive. He was particularly struck with the fine tree growing in Mr. P. Lenn's orchard, and requested to see it. It reached its full height in the time in Wellington what could be done in the North. This tree is a beautiful pine, having now fully 100 dozen oranges upon it, 60 dozen being previously picked. The soil is from a deep, extraordinary large orange from a three-year-old tree grown by Mr. B. Bonit. These oranges were the size of good pippin apples some 12 months ago. In North Auckland, with rice and profit, and

Mr. S. A. Wood, of Parnell, died at the advanced age of 71. He had been in the country for nearly half a century, having arrived at the Bay of Islands in 1842, and he had travelled in the North when he bore his part, witnessing the establishment of British sovereignty over New Zealand, and one of those who welcomed Governor Hobson, the first Governor, to his residence at Waitangi. He had subsequently come on to Auckland, and was very present at the laying of the foundation-stone of St. Paul's Church, and is stated to have purchased the first section in Parnell sold by the Crown.

A prisoner named O'Flaherty, awaiting trial on a charge of larceny, attempted to commit suicide at the Outram lock-up. He had been received from Invercargill the previous night, and while sitting in the cells he had taken a razor and found him in the act of cutting his throat. He had the knife hidden in a truss he wore next his skin. The wound

A fire broke out in Hutton, King, and Co's holly manufactory, Dunedin, on July 25, doing a great deal of damage. The building is insured in the National for £1000, and the stock and fixtures are insured in the Equitable and Australasian for £1000. The United Fire and Marine Insurance Co. have their factory destroyed some months ago.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock on July 25, a fire broke out in the brick drapery store occupied by Mr. McDonald, and before it began to spread it was extinguished. The goods in the shop were saved, but the furniture of the Terminus Hotel, and the Union Bank. Mr. Sweetman's furniture in the Terminus Hotel was partially saved. Fortunately the wind changed opportunely, and the fire did not spread. The goods which have been collected, several large grain stores will still be in jeopardy. Insurances: Terminus Hotel, £1400 in the New Zealand office; furniture, £500 in the Colonial; brick the Terminus Hotel, £400 in the Colonial; the Colonial; bank, £200 in the Union; McDonald's stock, £100 in the New Zealand.

A rabbit on Bann's run at Greenfield was savagely attacked by a dog.

The Wellington correspondent of the N. Z. Herald news-— " News from Parikahia states that the leasing of the West Coast Pigeon Preservation Act has led to the congregation of a large number of Maori on the coast. They are all anxious how to dispose that the gate is open, and they are flocking to the settlement very much after the old fashion. At present there are seven or eight hundred strangers there, and their presence is a great annoyance to the natives.
The latter has been telling them that their lands will be given back to them; but whether his words will receive the same credence as in the old days remains to be seen. Some anxiety appears to be felt about the future of the settlement, which, for the Maoris have come nothing to which ex-caption could be taken. The presence of so many strange Moors at the settlement, who have practically nothing to do, while they wait their place, cannot but be a source for anxiety, if any uneasiness is called for at all. To Whitt, it is well known, is a very timid man personally, and his influence would probably be always for peace and quietude. It is not, however, probably be essential. It might not, however, have the same power as regards the visitors. Many of these will be obliged to leave shortly for want of food, but there is a man to be believed to return, perhaps reinforced by others, and possibly start planting. It is not, however, that near the prophet once more. It is further believed that the most contented judge of any movement of the settlers should be judged. It would not be organized al-of an accidental collision between the two. Mr. Bryon, it will be remembered, has been favored with a very extension of the Act last season, but the unexpected political crisis intervened. It has to be borne in mind that Par-

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN PUBL.
SCHOOLS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I regret to find that Dr. Barry, in your issue July 23, still adheres to the opinion that "the Roman Catholic authorities in Ireland in a less Ultramontane age accepted Dr. Whately's Scripture lessons. Now, emphatically assert that there is no foundation whatever for the statement. In order to remove all doubt I have gone to the trouble of carefully looking over all the documents that were drawn up by the Government of the day in regard to National education in Ireland. The inquiry, though perhaps a little tedious, cannot fail just now to be interesting. Dr. Barry will excuse me if I at once tell him that he seems to me to have lost sight, or to have knowledge whatever, of the fundamental principles on which the National system of education in Ireland was founded. This system, as everyone knows, was established in the year 1831. The Right Hon. Mr. Stanley, then Secretary for Ireland, in the month of October of that year wrote a letter to the Hon. Sir George Corry, then Secretary to the Privy Council, in which he was sending him a copy of the proceedings of the proposed new board, but latterly justly regarded by all as the charter of the National system in Ireland. The following extract from it will fully explain the principles which guided Mr. Stanley. He says:—“A committee of the House of Commons, to which we referred the various reports of the Commissioners of Education, had recommended that the National system should be founded on a combined literary and a secular religious education, and should be capable of being so far adapted to the views of the religious persuasions which divide Ireland as to render it in truth a system of national education for the lower classes of the community. For the success of the union taking, or the continuity, of the system, much must depend upon the character of the individuals who compose the board, and upon the security thereby afforded to the country that, while the interests relation are not overlooked, the most scrupulous are shown to be taken not to interfere with the peculiar tenets of a description of Christian pupils." In a word, the system proposed by Mr. Stanley was to exclude even the suspicion of proselytism. Now, in order to understand this measure of precaution taken by the Government in the year 1834, it is necessary to refer to the systems of education that had vailed in Ireland previous to that year. They were all persons self-acting. There were the Charter schools, the Blue Coat Hospital school, the London Hibernian School Society and the Kilmore-place Society schools; and as to the more or less ardent on popery, they had no need of harder or more forcible proof of this assumption.

He was allowed to cite one witness whose testimony placed this matter beyond all doubt. The Charter schools were founded in the year 1738 and all the Protestant bishops and bishops, and all the nobility and gentry, prefined the King that such a school should be established in each parish, and that the Rev. Dr. John Foster, Bishop of Down, headed this memorial, and who at the time ruled the Church and State in Ireland, writing to a Protestant prelate in England, thus detailed the motives which impelled them to present that petition.

great numbers of Papists in this country, and that the Government is trying what may be done with their children to bring them over to our Church. I can assure you that the Papists are not at all interested in the Government's efforts to convert them, and are interested to try all possible means to bring them and their children over to our religion, and one of the likeliest methods we have to think of, it is, I am sure, to convert their children. I am not, however, for the Government. For instead of converting those that are adult, we are daily losing many of our members who go off to Papery." Now, to my mind, Lord De Barry's remarks are not only untrue, but they are also a slur upon all kinds of proselytism, and accordingly we find that several years the system worked admirably, because the children of the highland and lowland Gaels were brought up to all kinds of proselytism, and accordingly we find that the system was humbugged and strictly adhered to. From the years 1851 to 1847 no question was raised about it. I have lately been to the States, and I have seen the same system being carried on by the principal and down by Lord De Barry. Therefore Dr Barry labours under a great mistake when he asserts that these same Scriptures were taken away from the children of the Gaels, and that the separate religious instruction was rigidly enforced by the Government.

rules of the Irish National Board. During the period 1831 to 1847 the board, in accordance with the regulations, required that the children of one denomination should not be allowed to attend at the religious instruction of those of a different creed. Thus, in July, 1833, we find a letter addressed to the Prosebyrian, the Rev. Mr. Love, in which the commissioners state that "the holy Scriptures might be read in his school, provided that children who are directed by their parents to attend at the school to continue at the school, and that all others do then retire. For it is essence of the rule that children whose parents do direct them to be present should previously retire." The regulations, as I said before, were strictly carried out.

several years. In 1847, however, the National Board, to the view of Presbyterians and Protestants, made a change in the rule in question. The history of this change is indeed a long one. I could not think of troubling you with the long line of evidence regarding it, which at time attracted much attention in Ireland, and which convinced me, and many friends, that the Board were right. I can, however, submit the statements of one or two witnesses. The first shall be Archdeacon Stopped, of the Protestant Bishop of Meath, to whom I referred in my former letter. On Mar 12 1846, he was examined on this point before a committee of the House of Commons, and gave the following evidence: "I am a member of the Board, and you did not think yourself justified in joining the Board. I did not. Will you have the goodness to state what are the grounds of your objection, and how they were removed?"

by the board?—The objection is point of principle which has been made by some people who are opposed to the passing of the school's constitution. They say that it is the parents' duty to remove children from religious instruction if they so desire. I am glad to hear that the board was ready to assent to the principle that if the parents do not wish their child to receive religious instruction, they may withdraw his child. Previously to putting your schools under the board, did you receive from them any satisfactory explanation as to why they were unable to give religious instruction? They declined to give me any explanations, but afterwards they gave me satisfactory explanations. It does, then, devolve on the parents to withdraw their children from receiving religious instruction. If a parent claims from you the right of telling the child to leave the school for him?—No, that was the explanation that was given. You put the question whether or not he had a right to demand that the board?—No, the rule was altered to meet my view.

This evidence requires no commentary.

The board efforts to resist the law thus defeated the committee's main purpose, and in this work the committee met with many difficulties, and were ably aided by Archbishop Standon and Dr. Whateley, the Protestant Archbishop of Dublin. Sydney, has secured the support of the Protestant hierarchy, and has set his foot in this colony when he proposes to us, and to the Catholic body to accept, not the separate religious instruction of the children, but the common religious instruction and the common Christianity propounded by the Protestant Archbishop of Dublin. I again assert emphatically, that no Catholic bishop in the world would permit his subjects to be instructed in the religion of another. I have known, a well-known supporter of the National system, learning that children were receiving religious instruction from Protestant teachers, to say, "I will not have that." In which he uses the following words: "I have lately become aware that the rules of your board afford, under Protestant patronage, a religious instruction to the children of Catholics, and I am therefore prepared to report to you." The late Bishop of Down and Connor, Dr. Donnelly, who was then a Commissioner of National Education, was asked by the National Education Commission-sons of the children who attend the National schools of Frederick-street, Dublin, that it is compulsory on them to attend to Scripture reading, and singing Protestant hymns, and explanations of Scripture given by a Protestant minister; and that if any one refuses to do so, he is liable to such punishment as the Board of Education may think such of the institution." Shortly after this, Dr. Doyle, a vir, disgusted with the treachery of the National Board, retired from it. Even Lord Derby himself, speaking in the House of Lords in 1858, regretted the failure of his efforts. "I very much much," he said, "regret that the system of united instruction, which I intended to introduce, has not been carried out to a very considerable extent, failing to realise the expectations of its promoters." I think it necessary to say more on this point, having already established that the combined religious institutions of the State are not only the largest but the wealthiest body in Ireland; and yet Dr Barry is not ashamed to invite the Catholics of New South Wales to accept the hands of the very same form.

Another point in Dr. Barry's letter of 23rd inst. He is pleased to say that the grievance of the Roman Catholic body is that the State is not doing enough for them. Now, down schools, where they are keeping up by a remarkable effort, as a matter of religious duty, are not recognised by the State, and rewarded for what they do by payment of a grant. The State is not doing enough for them, and a very great grievance, that the Catholic schools are not recognised or rewarded for what they do. The State for the secular instruction which they impart, is, I repeat, a grant of a considerable sum of money. It is a loss of money of which they are justly deprived.

While, however, submitting to this grievance, they have the advantage of admitting that they have made very great sacrifices to provide Christian education for their children.

and that the 24,000 children now under the Catholic school have suffered no injury, but rather derived great advantage from the truly religious instruction they receive from their religious teachers. In this respect the Catholic school is far ahead of the secular one. And if Dr. Barry would use exertions in securing to the Catholic body his rights, I assure him that in that case he may count on our aid.

But, I regret to say, there seems little or no prospect that the Lordship will do this. He has, it may be, 24,000 Catholic children in his charge, but he has 24,000 Protestants in his care; and he is so well equipped in secular and religious education, that he is able to give the children of both religions the same instruction. Christianity, which was devised for the purpose of undermining their faith, of weaning them from the abuses, the corruptions, the idolatry of the heathen, and of instructing in the principles of their holy faith, and learn in its integrity the religion of their Divine Master, in one word, the religion of Jesus Christ, is now, this is eternal life, and they may know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent.

There is, however, a grievance, and a much more serious one, which Dr. Barry refers to. It is the attendance of about 24,000 children at the various Public and National schools of the colony. I say this grievance is a
